

Cap Table

PRE-FORMATION · ILLUSTRATIVE STRUCTURE, NOT FINAL NUMBERS

WHAT THIS IS, AND ISN'T

Botlien has not yet incorporated, and the founder equity split between Antonio and Samuel has not been decided. This document shows the structure a cap table will take, who the categories of stakeholders are and how a SAFE affects ownership at conversion, without inventing a split that hasn't actually been agreed to. Once incorporation is complete and the split is set, replace the TBD values below with real numbers and move this to a live spreadsheet for actual tracking, a static document like this isn't the right tool once shares are actually being issued and updated over time.

Illustrative structure

How the SAFE affects this table

Botlien is raising on a post-money SAFE, which means a SAFE holder's ownership percentage is fixed at the moment they invest, based on their Purchase Amount divided by the Post-Money Valuation Cap. That percentage is set at investment, not diluted by later SAFEs. When Botlien eventually raises a priced equity round, all outstanding SAFEs convert into Preferred Stock together, and it is the founders' ownership, along with the option pool, that gets diluted to make room for that conversion, not the earlier SAFE holders' percentages. This is why the founder split above matters for real financial planning even before a dollar has been raised, every SAFE signed reduces the founders' eventual ownership by a known, calculable amount.

Open decisions this table depends on

Founder equity split between Antonio and Samuel, not yet decided, tied to the broader decision-rights conversation between the two of you.

Option pool size, typically 10–20% at this stage for a two-person team planning to hire, not yet decided.

Incorporation, a cap table technically requires an issuer of record to mean anything legally, this becomes real once Botlien is formed.

This is a structural placeholder, not a legal or accounting document, and has not been reviewed by an attorney or accountant. Once the founder split, option pool, and incorporation are settled, have this rebuilt as a real, maintained cap table, in a spreadsheet or a captable tool like Carta or Pulley, not a static PDF.
